

Learning to Learn in your school

Introduction to Learning to Learn: a whole school approach

The Course aims to introduce the Campaign for Learning's research and to explore some of the ways in which the principles can be adopted for other schools. It is aimed at teachers unfamiliar with Learning to Learn and will explore the background to the project, the evidence and the results. The course will also give a brief overview of current policy developments and how they relate to learning to learn.

At the end of the course participants will:

-
- Identify how the 5Rs relate to individuals

 - Reflect on the Learning to Learn principles and how they can be applied in their own context

 - Explore the benefits for schools and individuals gained from creating a personalised learning culture

 - Discuss the links between current education policy and learning to learn

 - Explores the ways that Learning to Learn can benefit schools

 - Develop a learning to learn action plan for their own context

Draft Timetable

This may change depending on experience of delegates

09:30	Welcome, refreshments and registration
09:45	Exploring the 'Five R's'
	Hands on experience of sample activities and ideas
11:15	The Case for Learning to Learn
	Presentation of examples and discussion
12:30	Lunch
13:30	Learning to Learn tool for personalised learning - ideas
	Learning to Learn for Every Child Matters - ideas
15:00	Action Planning for the future
	Completing individual action plans
16:00	Close

Tutor Profile

Lisa Vernon is Head of Policy and Research at The Campaign for Learning. She has over 15 years of experience in leading learning, including primary, secondary and adult essential skills.